Course Description

Adaptation is a fabulous classroom project: it requires students to analyze, adapt, modify, plan synthesize, devise. All the higher order thinking skills.

But you can't just throw a narrator into a script and call it a day. You have to have a preparation process leading up to the writing process.

In this course you will learn practical exercises and a path to prepare your students to take on their own adaptation project. We'll look at the guidelines to adaptation, things to think about when choosing a text, how to analyze the source material and writing that first draft.

So join me, Lindsay Price, in the Play Adaptation Project.

About the Instructor

Lindsay Price has been a professional playwright for 20 years working specifically in the education market. She averages 500 productions a year in schools across Canada, the US and overseas and has over 60 published plays. Her work has advanced to the Showcase Level of the Sears Drama Festival, been performed at the International Thespian festival, and in 2013 she won the Ronald M. Ruble New Play award.

Lindsay is also an accomplished workshop instructor, dramaturg and adjudicator. She teaches regularly at the International Thespian Festival. She has taught at the Educational Theatre Association Conference as part of the Professional Development Institute, and was invited to teach at the World Congress of the International Drama and Education Association in Paris. She is a mainstage adjudicator for the Educational Theatre Association and has adjudicated one act festivals in Florida, Ontario, Virginia, and Indiana. She is an invited member of the Theatre Ontario Talent Bank in adjudication, creative writing, and play polishing. She is a member of the Playwrights Guild of Canada, The Dramatists Guild of America, The Educational Theatre Association, and Theatre Ontario.

This lesson defines adaptation, as well as introduces 'hook' exercises to get students engaged in the project.

Lesson 3: Choosing a Text 5:27

In this lesson we're going to look at choosing a text - what goes into choosing a text for adaptation? Students will learn about copyright, the thesis for the adaptation, the why and discussing how changes will affect the original source material - meaning, is the original iconic.

Lesson 4: Close Reading and Analysis 6:20

This lesson gets into the nitty gritty of adaptation; the analysis and close reading of the source material.

Lesson 5: The First Draft 9:47

This lessons covers the next step of taking all this pre-work, all this analysis, and writing the first draft.
