INTRODUCTION

Starting a project, exercise, or activity can be challenging for drama students. To say "Write a scene about anything you like!" or "Just make it up — go for it!" is overwhelming. Even the most creative student can get stumped.

Enter prompts. In these pages you will find 2000 (yes, two thousand!) ideas, suggestions, and kernels of inspiration on a multitude of subjects: the great outdoors, clothing and accessories, action words, colours, would-you-rather questions, and more. With 100 prompts per topic and 20 different topics, there is something for everyone, even the least inspired drama student. And it's all at your fingertips in this resource.

Prompts are generally used to start or inspire scenes, whether the scenes are written, improvised, or acted out. You can also use the prompts in this resource to inspire non-speaking scenes like mime, clown, or tableaux; to give deeper descriptors to characters' personalities and likes/dislikes; to play games and do warm-ups; to create costume designs and mood boards; and more. There's really no wrong way to use a prompt. Even if the prompt you get doesn't quite work and you need to modify it, that's ok! It got you started, and that's what matters.

For each topic, you'll find a list of some activities you can use the prompts for, as well as exit slip questions relating to the topic. You could also use the exit slip questions for opening bellwork or check-in questions. The possibilities for these prompts, exercises, and questions are truly endless. We can give you the push to get started. Then, see where the prompt takes you. The only limit is your imagination!

EXIT SLIP QUESTIONS

- In everyday life, do you tend to speak slowly or quickly? Does this change when you are performing in drama class? Why or why not?
- Which is worse: listening to a fast talker and asking them to repeat themselves because you didn't hear what they said, or listening to a slow talker and getting bored with the conversation? Why?
- What's an activity or hobby you enjoy that requires speed? What's an activity or hobby you enjoy that takes time to complete?
- Would you rather arrive early or late to an event? Why?
- What does "theatrical pacing" mean? Explain it in your own words. (Note: We don't mean "pacing" as in walking back and forth in anxiety or annoyance.)
- Why is pacing important in a theatrical performance?
- Imagine that you had the power of super speed. What are three things you'd do with this power?
